other of whom has died since, Roy Dunnaway. Turner, who had worked for the Sheriff's Office, died in 2013, and Dunnaway, Herrig's predecessor, died in 2017.

In his suit, Bledsoe claims that Morgan, Woods, Johnson, Herrig, Carreno, Frost, Poppa, Vanderbilt, Hayes, Turner and Dunnaway conspired to frame him for Arfmann's murder even though his brother reportedly had already confessed to the crime in the presence of law enforcement officers.

"They fabricated evidence 'to bolster their flimsy case,' the lawsuit contends," quoting here from the Reflector's story.

Bledsoe is seeking unspecified punitive damages against the defendants and is demanding a jury trial.

A statement issued by the Kansas Press Association, to which both county papers belong, was mentioned in the Reflector's story. It said the Attorney General's Office would have a "tall task ahead of it" in attempting to get an author's notes under the Kansas Shield Law.

"The shield law has protected journalists from disclosing sources in civil cases for over a decade, and there is no reason to believe it will cease being effective now," the statement concluded.

"Four Shots in Oskie — Murder and Innocence in Middle America," which was published this spring, chronicles Arfmann's murder, the arrests of first Thomas Bledsoe and then Floyd Bledsoe, the victim's brother-in-law, in connection with the killing, Floyd Bledsoe's trial and subsequent imprisonment, and the effort by the Paul E. Wilson Project for Innocence and Post-Conviction Remedies over a period of several years to secure, at the very least, a new trial for Bledsoe in view of the available DNA evidence.
